

2026 Race for the Million – Tire Selection Process

Tires for all 2026 Race for the Million events will be purchased at the track and officially stamped for that specific event. The following procedures outline how tire selection order will be established and maintained throughout the season:

Initial Event – Tire Selection Order

For the first event of the season, tire selection order will be determined by the order in which driver and car combo entries are submitted.

The first driver and car combo to enter will receive first tire selection, the second will receive second selection, and so on.

Driver only entries and or car only entries will not hold a spot in the tire selection process. Once the driver and car combo is confirmed and submitted to RFTM, that will be their official time stamp.

Subsequent Events – Tire Selection Order

Beginning with the second event, tire selection order will be established based on the official qualifying results from the previous Race for the Million event.

Drivers who did not participate in the previous event will make their tire selection after those who did. The order will be determined by the entry timestamp for the current event..

Tire selection order is assigned to the driver, not the car after the first event.

If a driver changes teams or car numbers, their tire selection position moves with them.

Additional Information

Backup cars are not eligible for tires.

If a driver switches to a backup car, they must use the same previously selected tires allocated to that driver for that event.

The full tire format, including quantities, compounds, and distribution procedures, will be released in a forthcoming release.
